

Certification Exam Pass Rates

Updated February 23, 2023

Graduates from some of Trocaire’s academic programs are required to take a licensing exam in order to be employed in their field. We use our student’s pass rates on their first attempt (First-time Pass Rates) on an exam to gauge the success rate.

NCLEX-RN Exam Pass Rates

The National Council Licensure Examination (NCLEX) is used to certify potential registered and practical nurses. It is administered by the National Council of State Boards of Nursing. Passing the exam is required for employment as a nurse. The figure below shows the first-time pass rates for Trocaire Nursing A.A.S graduates on the NCLEX – Registered Nurse licensing exam, with New York State and National averages, over the past five years.

NCLEX-PN Exam Pass Rates

The figure below shows the same information for the NCLEX – Practical Nurse Licensing exam, taken by our graduates of the Practical Nursing certificate program.

ARRT Exam Pass Rates

The American Registry of Radiologic Technologies (ARRT) offers an exam that certifies registered technologists. Most employers require this certification to work in radiology. The figure below shows the first-time pass rates of Trocaire’s Radiological Technology graduates taking the ARRT licensing exam, versus the national average, over the past five years. As of February 23, 2023, the national pass rate for 2022 has not been made available.

CST Exam Pass Rates

The National Board of Surgical Technology and Surgical Assisting (NBSTSA) offers an exam that certifies surgical technologists and is required to work in the field. The figure below shows the first-time pass rates of Trocaire’s Surgical Technology graduates taking the CST certification exam, versus the national average, over the past five years. As of February 23, 2023, the national pass rates for 2021 and 2022 have not been made available.
